“Right now emotional intelligence is viewed as the most critical ability to possess, more critical than other soft skills and functional excellence”

Modern leaders must focus on interpersonal enablement

Based on research from the Center for the Future of Leadership with the support from participants in the 2020 Leadership Practices Inventory (LPI) study, the following skills are identified as critical for effective leadership in the future:

- 1. Emotional Intelligence (20.63%)
The ability to understand and manage your own emotions, and to understand and influence the emotions of others.
- 2. Empowerment (17.14%)
The ability to help others develop their skills and confidence, and to provide them with the resources and support they need to succeed.
- 3. Team Management (15.14%)
The ability to build and lead a team that is effective and efficient, and to ensure that team members are working together towards common goals.
- 4. Coaching and Mentoring (13.72%)
The ability to help others improve their performance, and to provide them with the guidance and support they need to succeed.

“These skills comfortably trumped both traditional leadership abilities and hard skills such as:

- delegation (5.89%)
- functional excellence (3.03%), and
- financial management (3.03%).”

The history

- Emotional Intelligence was conceptualised by Peter Salovey and Jack Mayer in 1990.
- Salovey and Mayer hypothesised that:
 - there may be abilities to do with emotions just as there are with words, numbers, shapes etc.
 - these abilities may be important because they could be developed and underpin many important areas of life such as success at work and the quality of interpersonal relationships.
- Their early definition: Emotional intelligence involves the ability to perceive, understand, utilise and regulate emotions.

Explosion of models and measures

26

Establishing the Genos model

- To determine a common way of defining EI we performed a large factor analytic study involving a number of the different models and measures of EI available at the time. These included:
 - MSCEIT (Mayer, Salovey, & Caruso, 1999)
 - Bar-On EQ-i (Bar-On, 1997)
 - TMMS (Salovey et al., 1995)
 - TAS-20 (Bagby, Taylor & Parker, 1994)
 - EI scale by Schutte et al. (1998)
 - EI scale by Tett et al., (1997)

genos

27

The common factors and a definition

The factor analytic study determined that EI could be commonly defined as ...

a set of skills that define how effectively we perceive, understand, express, reason with and manage emotions within oneself and others.
